

Contents

Having Children in a Big City: Different Social Groups, Different Conditions, Different Behaviours (Edited by Maria Cristina Migliore)	VII
Acknowledgments	XI
1. Introduction	1
2. The Turin Longitudinal Study for the Analysis of Fertility	3
1. Event History Approach for the Explanation of Social Phenomena	3
2. Data for the Analysis of Demographic Behaviour	6
3. What Is the TLS?	9
4. Discussion	14
3 Turin: the Urban Context	15
1. Urbanization and Deurbanization	15
2. Demographic Trends	23
3. Discussion	35
4. The Changing Relationship between Female Labour Force Participation and Fertility	37
1. The Theoretical Framework: How Social Changes Affect Demographic Phenomena	37
1. Which Utility Function?	39
2. Educational Attainment and Female Role in Paid Work	40
3. Quality and Quantity Trade-off	41
2. Family, Fertility and Female Participation in the Italian Context	42
3. Data, Method and Hypotheses	43
4. Results	45
5. Discussion	50
5. Lowest-Low Fertility in an Urban Context. When Migration Plays a Key Role	53
1. Migration and Fertility as (Potentially) Interrelated Processes	53
1. In-migration and Fertility	54
2. Fertility and Out-migration	55
3. Factors that May Simoultaneously Influence both Fertility and Out-migration	55